Forfeiture Training

May 31, 2013

Arizona's forfeiture statute provides law enforcement agencies with the means to: destroy the money base of illegal enterprises; deter individuals from using their property to facilitate criminal activity; confiscate the proceeds of criminal activity; and rededicate those proceeds to the public good. For these reasons, and many more, asset forfeiture is now recognized as one of the most powerful tools for targeting criminals and criminal enterprises. Additionally, an asset forfeiture practice that supplements other law enforcement activities provides an opportunity that is unique among governmental agencies – the direct augmentation of the agency's budget through the performance of its designated function.
